Channel Lake Pavilion Destroyed by Fire on Early Sunday Morning

Manager George Paty Says
Plans to Re-build Are Considered

Channel Lake pavilion at Channel lake, last of the three large dance pavilions that for years attracted thousands to the Antioch resort area was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. It was owned by Joseph Paty of Cicero, Ill.

The roof of the $50,000 structure was ablaze when the Antioch fire department got there and the attention of the firemen was turned to saving the cottages around it.

Ted Smith of Channel lake, brother-in-law of the owner's son, George Paty, the manager, discovered the blaze shortly before 5 a. m. when he arrived home, and he cut his hand badly in breaking a window of Paty's bedroom in arousing him.

Paty and his family were asleep in a summer cottage only a few yards from the burning building and the cottage was scorched from the intense heat of the fire.

Vernon Barnstable, Antioch fireman, suffered a burn on the neck while battling the blaze. He and Smith were given first aid by the Antioch Rescue squad.

Edgar Simonsen, Antioch fire chief, said the fire was reported at 5 a. m. He called Lake Villa to help but by the time the two departments got there the pavilion was engulfed by flames.

Total Loss Is $60,000

The pavilion was insured at $24,000 but the loss is nearer $60,000. The building, 100 x 150 feet in size was originally built as a pavilion and later remodeled and used for a club house for sororities of Illinois who would use it during the summer time. After Winch's pavilion on Rte. 173 at Channel lake burned, it was obtained for use as a dance hall, and as the only sizable one left in the community drew large crowds each summer.

Lost Personal Belongings
George Paty said that while the building was worth about $50,000 there was nearly $10,000 worth of household goods and other material stored in the building.

"My wife and I had our wedding presents from four years ago stored there and they had much value."

The Patys lived in a summer cottage and had much of their linens stored in the pavilion, he said.

The manager said that the fire evidently started in the vicinity of the fuse boxes of the electrical wiring system because the flames seemed to be stronger in the center of the building where they were located and spread in all directions rather than in any corner.

Young Paty said that plans are to rebuild when the insurance money is received.

"We may not have as large a structure but we will have something," he said.

The Palace, another large dance pavilion situated on Rte. 21 south of Antioch, was destroyed by fire in 1932.

During the golden decade 1920-1930 whole trainloads of pleasure seekers came to Antioch on the Soo Line and spent the week-ends at one or the other of the three pavilions.

The only one now left in the general area is at Twin Lakes.

Young Burdick told his parents that while he was sliding down the hill alone his toboggan struck a knoll and he was thrown off with such force that his leg was broken.

First aid was given by the Antioch Rescue squad and Vernon was then taken to the hospital on instruction of the physician, Dr. I. L. Breakstone. The boy is a pupil in the eighth grade of the Antioch Grade school.

Village Board to Meet on Wednesday Evening Because of New Year's

Problem of Handling Snow to Be Main Point of Discussion

Snow will be the main topic of conversation next week when the village board meets.

Because the regular meeting time falls on New Year's day, the session will be convened on the following Wednesday evening, President James McMillen announced.

The big snowfall this fall and winter has provided an unusually big task for the street department. Village employees have done an exceptional job in keeping the streets clear and usable. Compared with most other towns in the vicinity, Antioch has been fortunate in that snow has been kept in control. Street department employees have asked that all persons park their cars off the streets when snow is falling or has been forecast in order to allow the plows room to clear the snow. At present Antioch has no ordinance forbidding parking during snowfalls, but the village board will probably consider some sort of regulation at the next meeting. In the meantime, street employees ask that residents be considerate and keep cars off the streets in order to enable them to better clear away the snow.

Work was started again today on the down-town streets and unless additional snows provide other burdens it is expected that the streets again will be cleared. There have been at least 20 inches of snow recently in Antioch.

Based on previous years, the gas tax money set aside for the handling of snow may be about used up and the board may be called upon to figure the cost of handling snow during the rest of the year.

President McMillen was quoted recently as saying that his biggest desire for Antioch during the coming year is street improvements. It is probable that not too much will be done because the motor fuel tax is small and under present plans to let it accumulate will not amount to enough for any paving jobs for a few years.

High School Students Go to Chicago Today For Careers Conference

More than 30 Antioch Township High school students went by bus this morning to Chicago where they attended the Career conference at the Illinois Institute of Technology at 3200 South State st.

Principal R. C. Edmundson will supervise the trips and the school buses will be used for both trips. At Chicago they will confer with specialists in the various sciences, arts, trades and professions who will advise them on their needs for advanced training in what future work they plan to take up. Practically all students going were seniors who plan advanced training next year. Although 46 signed up for today and 70 for Friday, the number was reduced for various reasons.

Mrs. Tulumello Will Represent Antioch at Ill. Educational Meet

Mr. Pease indicates that the major consideration will be given to new or needed legislation; problems growing out of increased school population; school reorganization; improvement of the curriculum; teacher shortage and building needs; teacher certification; and teacher training.

Economic Highlights

It's a safe bet that nothing since World War II, with the single exception of the Korean conflict, has so thoroughly rocked this country as the graft revelations. And, according to reports on the contents of Congressional mail from the folks back home, nothing has so shocked and revolted the people.

Democratic party chairman McKinney recently said that he is sure the scandals will not be an issue of the 1952 campaign, on the grounds that the President and other Democrats are handling the situation, and will clean everything up neatly in short order. This, in the view of most observers, is whistling in the dark with a vengeance. The graft has been going on too long, and too many people in key Administration jobs are directly or indirectly involved. On top of that, it was a junior Republican senator, Williams of Delaware, who cracked open the tax frauds and has seen to it that the investigations kept going. And it is an interesting fact that some Democrats who have done valiant work on behalf of high ethical standards of government—such as Senators Kefauver and Douglas—are persona non grata at the White House.

The reaction of the American press to the scandals has been one of anger—just as was the case with the scandals of the Harding administration. As a general rule, the editorial attitude has been "turn the rascals out." This has been buttressed by most of the columnists, who are taking a similar line. And on the factual side, coverage of the news by both press and radio has been excellent.

The big thing, of course, has been the graft in the Internal Revenue Bureau. This has completely overshadowed the deep freeze and mink coat episodes, and for an excellent reason. As Robert Ruark put it, "We cannot understand a billion here, a billion there, because so few of us deal in billions that they just represent a long line of zeros. We cannot understand the deviations of the state department. The good Lord knows we cannot understand what has transpired with prices and ceilings and economics in general, because it is a solid cinch the people who perpetrate them do not understand them, either.

"But there is one thing we know, from Natchez to Mobile, and Memphis to St. Joe. Taxes we know. I know 'em because I owe 'em. You know 'em. You know 'em because they squeeze 'em right out of your tired old take-home, and you never get through one year without fretting about the next."

Everyone kicks at the tax collector as a matter of course, but everyone has believed that Internal Revenue was honest as they come. Now that the Bureau has taken on the smell of an ancient fish, the general public has turned whopping mad. And on the level of general principle, it seems certain that many millions of average Americans feel like Holmes Alexander, who wrote, "No tramp of a foreign invader has so shaken the temple of our freedom like the stealthy tread of thieves who are still at large within the government. And unless we wake up to these dangers, the Communist dream of decaying democracy can become our own nightmare."

Grass Roots Opinion

SOMERSET, PA., DAILY AMERICAN: "It is surprising how many people there are who imagine that the government has a means for obtaining money that makes its gifts to the people real benefits. The fact is that the government has no means for obtaining money except taxes and loans to be repaid from taxes."

FOLEY, ALA., ONLOOKER: "Because we believe the people of this nation are now being taxed to just about the limit of their endurance, we of The Onlooker are prone to oppose any measure which will add to our tax load. When we consider the great amount of tax money which is now being used to support a great portion of our population in idleness, we think our people will do well to frown on any measure which will tend to increase the tax burden."

GATESVILLE, N. C., JINDEX: "It isn't that we are advocating inflexible rules, practices, and laws governing the farming industry. We still put some credence in the old law that 'changing times demand changing laws,' and we fully expect to look for old practices and laws to be improved as time moves along. Yet, too many changes, too much politics, fattening subsidies, and a super-abundance of 'spokesmen' for the farmer could so weaken the whole structure that it will either topple or grow into disfavor somewhat as organized labor did when it formed the Roosevelt partnership and then outgrew its britches because of the false notion that the country would stand for most anything."

CANADIAN, TEXAS, RECORD: "Yes, it is possible that if we continue to relinquish our personal dignity and our individualism to government we will one day wake up and find we have relinquished our country without a struggle."

January 1 Date Fairly Modern

The custom of welcoming in the New Year on January 1 is a relatively modern one. Down through history the holiday was a movable one, many people and nations celebrating at different times of the year.

The vernal equinox, March 22, was celebrated as the start of the new year by the Jews. The Greeks celebrated on December 21, the time of the winter solstice. The autumnal equinox, September 22, marked the beginning of a new year for ancient Egypt.

It was not until the coming of the Gregorian calendar, instituted by Pope Gregory in 1582, that the groundwork was laid for a universal celebration. The continent of Europe, having celebrated New Year's on March 25 since medieval times, was the first to adopt the calendar popularly.

Yet it was not a complete adoption. Great Britain provided the weight that finally tipped the scales in favor of Gregory's calendar in 1752, when the British parliament officially established New Year's day as January 1.

Old Irish Celebration Was 'Baking the Cake'

Old Erin had one of the most unusual New Year's day celebrations to be found anywhere. Called "baking the cake", it was a favorite with Irish peasants.

Proud husbands would invite all their friends over to participate in the ceremony and partake of the "gude woman's baking."

When the cake was fully prepared, the eldest son took it and hurled it with all his force against the door. Everyone scrambled to pick up the pieces, for, according to the superstition, he who picked up the first fragment to touch the floor would have a home and a New Year's cake to share the next year.

Did Washington Start Custom of Open House?

American historians credit George Washington with starting the custom of receiving friends, or holding "open house" on New Year's day.

In the year 1790 New York was the seat of the government and President Washington made a practice of opening the doors of the presidential mansion for a reception on each New Year's day. Home and foreign diplomats, and ordinary citizens as well, visited.

Washington was said to have expressed the hope that the observance might continue through the years. His wish was granted, for it is still a custom at the White House.

Left Shoes Were Once Right Ones—Vice Versa

NEW YORK — Anybody with a normal walk will find that his heels wear out first on the outside. Years ago, people wore their heels down evenly—because they kept switching their right shoe to their left foot and vice versa!

This shoe switching routine predated the invention of "rights" and "lefts." The idea that a shoe should conform to the shape of the human foot was well known in antiquity, but was not heard of in this country until the Civil War days. With improvements in tanning, which produced leather soles and uppers more flexible for increased comfort, shoemakers began to experiment with left and right lasts and with more sizes and widths than the traditional "slim" and "stout" which were the only choice a shoe buyer then had.

The first manufacture of right and left shoes on a wide scale occurred when Union soldiers were outfitted during the Civil War. As a result of the popularity of these shoes, civilian footgear was designed in the same way, and different right and left shapes became standard.

Perfume Maker Gets Nose Into Work for Best Results

PARIS — Creating a new perfume may take a perfumer one year or ten years . . . (no reputable "nose" would leave his "work" until it was as close to perfection as he could make it). During all the time he is striving for the exact scent which is in his mind, he spends his days—and often nights—smelling and mixing. On blotters specially made for this purpose from odor-free paper, he sniffs each changed solution in all kinds of environments—in his laboratory, in his home, in various places where he might find himself. He sniffs, too, under all types of weather conditions—a bright sunny day, a muggy, warm day, a clear, cold day. As he progresses, he may find that the mixture is a bit too sweet or tart, perhaps a touch too smouldering or too airy. At the same time he is working towards his goal, he considers what is called the "roundness" of the bouquet. We like to compare a "rounded" perfume to a perfect flower setting which has just the right number of blossoms and leaves, arranged in beauty of form and color. Add one too many parts or take away one too many, and it loses its lovely balance.

"Hubbub"
Early American colonists found the Indians playing a dice-like game that became known as "hubbub," because of the shouts of "hub-bub-hub" that accompanied it.

Infant Tastes

The newborn infant has a much more highly developed sense of taste than of sight or hearing. Every day-old child already has preferences as to what tastes he likes or dislikes. Sweet tastes are relished, but salt, sour or bitter tastes are rejected with a definite cry of distaste.

FIVE MINUTES MORE . . . Here's a clock with a hand like a foot, which doesn't seem to detract a bit from its face. If you can do this trick at five minutes to 12 on New Year's Eve, you're entitled to a Happy New Year.

Chatham Islanders Are First in World To See New Year In

Shepherds watching their flocks on the Chatham Islands, New Zealand, will welcome the New Year while milkmen in America are making their rounds on the last day of the old year.

When the bells of the little church on one of the islands, a British colony of about 200 persons, rings at midnight to welcome a new year, it is high noon according to Big Ben of London and is but 7 a.m. in sleepy New York.

Chatham Islands always celebrate the New Year first because they are located nearest to the starting point of time—the admiral's date line. It is made to curve east and west of the 180th meridian in such a way that it lies always in the ocean. The islands are just east of the line.

The incoming year leaves the islands and races westward along the equator at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. Chatham islanders will be preparing to sit down for their New Year's dinner when howling mobs are warming up to greet 1952 on Times Square.

Happy Time in Japan Is First Day of Year

One of the happiest days on the Japanese calendar is the first day of the year. No matter how poor a man may be, he always manages to have a set of new clothes to wear when he visits all his friends on New Year's Day.

Celebrations in the land of the rising sun sometimes last as long as two weeks. Even the poorest of the land refrain from work for at least three or four days in order to celebrate.

At midnight on New Year's Eve the bells ring out loud and clear and a carnival atmosphere dominates the country.

LIGHTING UP . . . This young lady isn't trying to burn the candle at both ends—she just wants to get the New Year off to a good start. May it start, and finish, the same way for you.

NEW YEAR AROUND THE WORLD

Long before history was recorded the Persians discovered sugar cane and made sweetmeats an important part of their New Year celebration. These pagan Persians also made human sacrifices on the eve of the New Year in the belief that their barren fields would be fertilized by the gods.

In ancient China it was a custom to make visits shortly after the New Year had begun. Hilarity reigned supreme in old India and Babylon, where celebration of the first day of a New Year was a very wild affair.

The superstitious people believed that during their frolicsome celebrations the pagan gods were asleep, else conveniently away from home. The Japanese always used holly for decorations at New Year's. It is an old belief that "the prick of the thorns on the leaves would scare away devils." The emperor's first bath, Hatsumizu, taken early New Year morning, was called a "religious rite of cleansing and purification performed by the ruler to bring peace and prosperity to Japan and his people."

Smart children in Belgium gather keys to every room in the house on New Year's eve, and then lock the elders in their rooms on New Year's morning, refusing to release them until promised a portion of sweets.

New Year Banquet Shows Variations All Around World

Feasting has always been an important part of the celebration of New Year's and menus differ around the world.

The New Year's Day banquet in England and Western Europe is similar to our American feast, chief difference being in the choice of side dishes. Turkey, duck or goose makes the popular roast in England, with plum pudding topping off the meal.

Turkey is again found in France, although capon and pheasant are as popular. The holiday fowls of the Latin countries are bedecked with truffles, chestnuts and olives and one might find snails on a menu in France.

An important dish among the Spaniards is sopa, rice cooked with olive oil, tomatoes, vegetables and meat particles. Africans partake of cous-cous, which is composed of wheat grains, lamb and vegetables.

Pickled greens, raw fish, roast bird and shrimp fritters are headliners among the Japanese, with pickled chrysanthemum petals considered a delicacy. The Swedes temper their feast with a special drink called glogg, which is a claret wine sweetened with sugar and flavored with almonds, raisins, dried orange peel, cinnamon, cloves and cardamom. It is usually set afire before serving.

New Year's Day Passes on All Old Superstitions

Through centuries of celebrations, New Year's Day has managed to pass on to each succeeding generation the superstitions that people of olden times held about the first day of the year.

Residents of England once believed it to be an ill omen if one shared a lighted match with another on New Year's morning. English maidens, and Scotch ones, as well, made a custom of rushing to the well at the stroke of midnight. The first to taste of the water would have the best luck during the ensuing year.

Residents of the Isle of Man held that a dark complexioned person brought good fortune with him if he were the first to enter a house after the new year had begun. A light-haired visitor was believed a bearer of misfortune.

In early America, New Englanders considered it inviting bad luck to go outside the house on New Year's Day until someone had entered.

Southerners believe that it invites prosperity when black-eyed peas are included on the New Year's Day menu.

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED . . . And this apparently is calling for service right away, which, after all, is in keeping with the spirit of the season. In other words, do right by the New Year and it will do right by you.

Poison Ivy Leaf Costs U.S. Workers Lost Working Days

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Leaflets three, let it be.

There is much practical truth in this old rhyme concerning poisey ivy, according to Dr. Roland R. Cross, director, Illinois State Department of Public Health.

Pointing to the relative seriousness of ivy poisoning, Dr. Cross said that a recent survey has indicated that about 600,000 work days are lost each year in the United States because some 350,000 unwary persons come into contact with the poisonous weed.

Ability to recognize poison ivy, and avoidance of it, is the only sure preventive of this type of poison, he said. This is not always easy, for the plant may take the form of a small shrub, a climbing vine or a thicket of plants growing as tall as five feet.

The compound leaf composed of three shiny green leaflets is characteristic of all types of poison ivy, however.

Dr. Cross added a special note of warning to those individuals who boast of natural immunity to poison ivy. Investigations have shown that no one is immune to the poisonous element in ivy, although some persons require greater exposure to be affected.

Immunization against ivy poisoning by intramuscular injections of urushiol, which is the poisonous element in the ivy plant, has proven successful in some cases. In other instances, the injections have not resulted in immunity, but usually prevent severe attacks. Generally the injections must be taken each year to be effective.

If a person knows, or has reasonable grounds to believe, that he has been exposed to poison ivy, the best precaution is to wash all possibly exposed parts of the body with laundry soap and water as soon as possible. Ordinary toilet soap is ineffective to neutralize the poisonous substance, Dr. Cross said.

Carte Du Jour

Calligula, or Little Boots, who succeeded Tiberius as ruler of the Roman Empire in 37 A.D., "drank pearls of immense value dissolved in vinegar." The prodigal emperor was as wildly extravagant with his guests, serving them "loaves and other victuals modeled in gold."

SHORT STORY

Summer Storms

By Ralph Blanchard

FOR a week it had been raining. Ken sat on the porch of the resort hotel and looked over the lake.

"Why in thunder doesn't it stop," he asked? He threw the newspaper at a fly on the railing.

Gail was sitting on the swing. She was pretty with a few freckles over her nose and cheeks—just a few.

"There's no use letting it get you, Ken," she said, knowing inwardly that she was tired of it, too.

"With this thing on your leg, you'd be fed up," he snapped, thumping the heavy cast. He had been in an accident two weeks ago. Now that there was rain he was doubly unhappy.

"Maybe by tomorrow I can take you for a ride in the boat," Gail suggested. "It looks as though it might stop raining tonight."

Ken kicked his good leg against the steps. "I'll go by myself. I'm not a cripple."

Gail felt her face redden a bit. She, too, was nervous and on edge. The rain had been so bad for the last week that no one had done anything but play cards. She turned her face from Ken.

"I'm sorry," he said.

Gail turned abruptly. "But Ken, you know the doctor warned you about being on the lake. What if you should have an accident?"

A wave nearly swamped the boat and he was thrown backward.

"I'm not an undernourished school kid, you know!"

She knew what he was thinking and answered, "Of course, you can take care of yourself, but it's better to be safe than sorry."

"Will you please shut up!" Gail looked at him. He had never come right out and said that he loved her, but she knew that he did. And she understood him, it wasn't that he was angry at her, but it was the whole business of rain and a broken leg.

THE next morning the rain stopped for a while. Ken was up early and down by the lake walking along the shore with his crutches. He felt better than he had for several days, and when he came to a boat he decided that he would go out just a little ways from the beach. With his crutch, he pushed the boat out, and laboriously placed himself between the two oars. He heaved a sigh as he felt the boat move over the water.

For a while he thought the sun was coming out from behind the clouds, but the sky grew darker. As the boat sped through the water, it would snap at the waves. After a few minutes, Ken realized that he had gone further than he had planned. He looked up at the sky and saw that it was just on the verge of storming. As he looked up, one of the oars slipped, slid down into the darkening water just out of reach.

The rain poured down as though someone had taken a knife and slashed the under side of the dark clouds. Quickly, he took the other oar and used it Indian fashion, but the boat was much heavier than a canoe, and it was hard to lift the heavy paddle.

The waves grew larger. The shore was at least three-hundred yards away, probably more, and the wind seemed to push the small boat further away. If only he had two oars, his arms would not have been so tired.

In his mind he saw Gail sitting on the porch. He wondered if he would ever see her again. His wrists ached and sharp pains shot through his broken leg.

A wave nearly swamped the boat and he was thrown backwards. His head hit the side of the craft. He was having a crazy, ugly dream. Multicolored spots swam up and down before his eyes. A sickening hum rang loudly in his head. Suddenly the dots disappeared. The hum stopped abruptly.

When he opened his eyes, he saw Gail blurred before his vision, and he heard her voice, softly, "It's all right, Ken. It's alright, now."

"She must have missed me and gone for help," he thought. Then, her voice faded away. As he closed his eyes, he knew she was right. Everything would be fine.

He felt her soft hand on his face. He wasn't quite sure whether he was sleeping or awake now, but he kissed her fingers as they caressed his lips.

Truly speaking, the first day of the year has no more significance as a holiday than that which is given to it by the imagination of mankind. It is important only because it marks a turning point—a spot on the calendar where civilization may say, "That period is done for; tomorrow we start anew."

If the passing year has been an unpleasant one, a time of war, plagues or poverty, the New Year becomes all the more important because it lies in the future that may offer blessed relief.

New Year's Day is a day of tomorrow and, for mankind, there are no unpleasant tomorrows.

To the poor, tomorrow offers security; for the sick there is a promise of health; the imprisoned may scale the walls of freedom; the smallest eaglet may learn to fly.

Thus, in essence, New Year's Day becomes one of the most important days in the year—the day of a new start. It is once more the moment that optimism becomes the asset of every human heart.

Days that have been passed with hours at once depart the world for the sketchy pages of history, and all men know that the world was—and shall be—according to the inhabitants. Mankind starts afresh, brimming with new hopes, ambitions and dreams, holding but one reservation:

If the new year fails to live up to expectation, there will be no regrets or contempt. It leads eternally to another year and another chance.

Chinese Thought Debts Had to Be Paid Up By End of Old Year

The Chinese long held a New Year's tradition worthy of note. No doubt made popular by early money-lenders, there was an old belief that if one did not pay all debts before midnight on New Year's Day, he lost "face."

For centuries China celebrated New Year's during the time of the first moon, usually about the first of February—but this was before adoption of the Gregorian calendar in 1912.

In earlier times, celebration began a week prior to the Eve, when homage was paid to the Kitchen God and climaxed on the "fifteenth day of the First Moon" by the Feast of Lanterns, or "Teng Chieh." It was a custom to exchange greeting cards and presents through the entire season.

Our Calendar, Relatively New, Unified Time

The Gregorian calendar has been in popular usage only since the late 18th century, and was the first calendar to bring about such a world unity on the time front.

Yet, it has not satisfied everyone. In fact, someone is always trying to introduce a new one.

One of these, concocted by a schoolboy about the time of the first World War, was considered seriously for many years. It was even brought to the attention of congress in 1945 and the countries of China and Great Britain showed interest.

Entitled the Edwards Perpetual Calendar, the plan offers striking revisions from the present Gregorian. To start, New Year's Day is not attached to any month of the year, but precedes Monday, January 1. Monday, incidentally, always starts the week, with Saturday and Sunday at the end of the week, where, it would seem, a week-end belongs.

There are 91 days in each quarter, with 30 days in each of the first two months of a quarter; 31 in the third, sixth, ninth and twelfth months of the year. Christmas, birthdays and all other holidays would always fall on the same day each year, and, feature appealing to the superstitious, there would never again be a Friday, the 13th.

And, lest we forget, something for the girls, leap year day would be a distinct 24-hour period between June and July—one more chance.

The calendar was worked out by Willard E. Edwards, A lieutenant in the navy during World War II, Edwards presented his calendar to the delegates to the San Francisco conference in 1945, where it met with much approval. He was soon swamped with letters from all parts of the world acclaiming the proposed calendar. Time, however, passes on and the pages of the Gregorian calendar still replace themselves, year after year.

To French Canadians 'Jour de L'An' Is A Great Occasion

The exchanging of gifts and general family reunions are important to the French-Canadian celebration of "Jour de L'An"—New Year's Day.

The conclusion of Christmas Day is the signal for a frenzied period of cooking and baking and making ready for an overflow of relatives and visitors that marks the celebration of the first day of the year. In most Canadian cities, midnight Mass is celebrated just as it is at Christmas time.

The "Patriarch," or father, is an important man on New Year's Day. As each member of a French-Canadian family arise on the first day of each new year, he speaks not a word to anyone until he has been to the father of the house to ask for his blessing. Individually, all members of the house come on bended knee to ask, "Father, give me your blessing," and the father extends a hand and says, "May God bless you, my child; I bless you with all my heart."

Just as at Christmas, everyone in the family goes to church, after which the family reunion gets underway. Married sons and daughters begin to arrive, and they, too, go first to the head of the house for his blessing.

The dinner for the day is almost a feast. The menu usually consists of soup, turkey, meat balls, tarts, rolls, creams, nuts and fruits.

After-dinner hours are spent in conversation among the older family members, while the children play.

Sometime during the first month of the year, all the married members of the family take a turn at inviting the family over for a "frit-cot," or get-together, the idea being that it will start a custom which will continue the course of the year.

Bible Foretold Future On New Year for Scots

The early Scots believed that it was possible to foretell the events of a coming year by turning to the Bible on New Year's Day.

It was long a custom to place the sacred book upon a table and open it at random, placing one finger on the printed page. The entire chapter then was read carefully, with the belief that the message it carried described in some way the happiness or misery in store for the person adhering to the practice.

EAGER PROMISES

Is There an Easy Resolution?

New Year resolutions have long been a common practice of humanity—and the brunt of a million jokes.

Neither fact is too surprising. Man always has been eager enough to make promises to himself and to others, just as he has been quick to criticize his own weakness when he fails to follow through.

Yet there are always reasons why resolutions fail. True, they might have been made with all seriousness, but still be lacking in strength of perseverance. The fallen resolutions are always those that were impracticable, and not easily adapted to the general pattern of living.

There is a parable: "No man putteth new wine into old wine skins."

A fermenting wine would easily burst the seams of an old wine skin, just as a non-practicable resolution falls along the wayside of daily living. If one is to make new and strong resolutions, there must be a new and stronger person to uphold them.

The easiest resolution of all to make and follow is one to work for a world of peace and harmony.

GREETINGS FROM MISS 1952 . . . The little girl personifies a bright and shining year ahead as she burns the last page of a tattered and torn 1951. Millions throughout the nation are preparing to welcome the New Year with prayers for an enduring peace.

YOU'RE ALL DONE, DAD . . . The old man, having served his time and done his duty during 1951, is ready for rest and retirement. Young 1952, however, eager and ready for the fray, is reaching out to take the cake—or is it pie? Happy New Year, anyway.

Old Romans Offered Gifts to God Janus

The word January comes from the Latin word "Janus". Janus was a god to whom the Romans offered sacrifices at the start of a new year to insure prosperity and good health for the days ahead. Strenia, goddess of strength, was also honored on the first day.

As early as 747 B.C., the Romans gathered gifts of bay and palm for New Year presents. As the years passed and Rome prospered, the gifts became more elaborate yearly, and, in time, it became the custom to bestow them upon the emperor, a habit that contributed greatly to the wealth of the Caesars. Claudius, recognizing the fact that the giving had graduated through the years from a voluntary tribute to a regarded duty, issued a decree limiting the amount which might be given.

Rome continued to celebrate the New Year under the Christian emperors. The idolatrous rites of the people, however, caused the church to ban Christians from participating in the celebrations, and it was not until December 25 was legally fixed as the date of the Nativity that the church made January 1 a religious festival, in commemoration of the circumcision of Jesus.

Dragon's Blood Out of Date

"Dragon's Blood," a deep red resin obtained from rattan cane palm trees in Eastern Asia, was used until recent years for coloring lacquers and varnishes. Now it has been replaced by coal tar dyes. It was mentioned by Pliny in his "Naturalis Historia," A.D. 77.
